The UCL Faculty of Laws invites outstanding academics in any field of law to apply for a Distinguished Visiting Professorship for the academic year 2018-19. Applicants must hold a post equivalent to a full professorship in the UK. Successful applicants are expected to spend a full academic year at UCL, typically on sabbatical leave from their home institution. Applications for periods shorter than a full year will also be considered provided that they cover at least one UCL term (for details of UCL’s term dates see: https://www.ucl.ac.uk/staff/term-dates/).

Distinguished Visiting Professors will spend most of their stay conducting research on a particular project. They are required to present their ongoing research throughout the course of the academic year and to participate in the academic life of the Faculty.

Selection Criteria:
Selection will primarily be based on the strength of the applicants’ research proposal, their overall contribution to their area of expertise, and how much they will benefit from visiting the UCL Faculty of Laws. Applicants must state clearly in their application the research they plan to undertake while at UCL.

Financial Support and Benefits:
Distinguished Visiting Professors will receive a housing allowance of £10,000 for a full academic year (pro rata for shorter periods). They will be given office space (with computer and telephone) in Bentham House, the Faculty’s historic building, which is currently being redeveloped (for more information see http://www.laws.ucl.ac.uk/about/#transforming-bentham-house). They will be able to participate in the Faculty’s events, such as staff seminars, workshops, conferences, public lectures etc. (for more information see http://www.laws.ucl.ac.uk/upcoming-events/all/). They will receive administrative support and have access to the UCL library and the library of the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies (IALS).
